Tylor was a self-educated, environment-based student, born into a Quaker family. He spent his time learning by travel and independent study. He is best known for his theory of "animism," as well as being the founder of modern-day cultural and social anthropology and his hatred for Christian practices.

those who enjoy a briefer read. This article, however, engages in a more detailed analysis of Tylor's theory of religion, notably his famous concept of animism, and some of the value and criticisms of his work *Primitive all these phenomena seem to belong to Tylor's implicitly defined category of magic. Tylor approached magic, as he did religion, in an intellectualistic manner.

The term “animism” was coined by the anthropologist E.B. Tylor (1832–1917). [1] It considers religion as a belief in spiritual beings. [2] According to Tylor, religious belief came from the primordial culture of attributing life and a soul, or spirit to inanimate objects like rivers, mountains and rocks to name just these few. [3]

Sir Edward Burnett Tylor was an English anthropologist, the founder of cultural anthropology. Tylor's ideas typify 19th-century cultural evolutionism. In his works Primitive Culture and Anthropology, he defined the context of the scientific study of anthropology, based on the evolutionary theories of Charles Lyell. He believed that there was a functional basis for the development of society and religion, which he
