recent years, attracting the attention of biomedical researchers, including those searching for a genetic link to the disease. The high rate of asthma among African American children has made race significant to this search for genetic predisposition. One of the primary sites for this research today is Barbados.

"Whitmarsh's investigation compels a rethinking of the biomedical stabilization of race and of enigmatic illnesses like asthma. His insight into the process by which race, genes, and environmental factors are negotiated in the Caribbean at the request of large corporations and scientific research teams is important.
